Akasaka Palace, where a magnificent Western-style palace and the beauty of Japanese tradition coexist, is Japan's only authentic Neo-Baroque palace. It was originally built in 1909 as the Crown Prince's residence. Today, it continues to host important state events and welcome international guests, while also being open to the public on selected days. Inside, visitors can admire highlights such as the "Kacho-no-Ma" (Room of Flowers and Birds) with its glittering chandeliers, and the "Asahi-no-Ma" (Room of the Rising Sun) decorated with brilliant gold leaf. The surrounding gardens offer seasonal beauty throughout the year. Within the grounds stands the Japanese-style annex "Yushintei," which features a traditional teahouse. Here, guests can enjoy the quiet elegance of tatami rooms and a serene Japanese garden. Why not visit and experience its unique charm yourself?
